U.S. BOARD ON GEOGRAPHIC NAMES

The Board on Geographic Names (BGN) was established in 1890 by President Benjamin Harrison and re-established in its present form in 1947 by Congress to standardize geographic name spellings throughout the federal government.

The board's work is primarily carried out by the Domestic Names Committee (DNC) and the Foreign Names Committee (FNC).

NIMA provides secretariat support to the FNC; committee membership includes the Central Intelligence Agency, Departments of Defense and State, and Library of Congress.

All BGN products are available to the public. Access to both foreign and domestic geographic names databases may be reached through the NIMA Home Page on the world wide web at <http://www.nima.mil/> (select the Maps and Geodata option from the menu to find the link to the GEOnet Names Server). A CD-ROM digital gazetteer is available for domestic geographic names. Hardcopy gazetteers covering foreign areas, researched by the FNC staff, may be purchased through USGS. A booklet describing the BGN's romanization systems for 29 non-Roman writing systems is also available.
